

The Business Review announces its 40 Under Forty program winners

Brendon Brader, the 20-something CEO of two telecommunication startups, and John Frye, the founder of a construction company that has grown from four to 45 employees in the last four years, are among this year's Business Review 40 Under Forty program honorees.

The 40 Under Forty program, entering its seventh year, recognizes outstanding members of the business community under the age of 40.

The list of winners is comprised of executives of large publicly held corporations, entrepreneurs and small-business owners from practically every segment of the Capital Region economy.

The winners were selected from nearly 200 nominations by a panel of area busi-
